Welcome to eWorld.

We've been ex

Imagine a place where you can send and receive electronic mail, access information about everything from news to finance, and find great things to do—all from the desktop of your Macintosh® computer. That's eWorld,™ the on-line service from Apple Computer.

eWorld puts you in touch with the global community of Macintosh users, and xpecting you.

it's your direct link to Apple Computer. It gives you the most in-depth Apple information available anywhere, right down to the resources used by Apple's own support organization.

Perhaps best of all, eWorld has been designed for ease of use. You can get where you want to go and find what you want to know, in seconds.

Something's alw

Getting around in eWorld is like getting around in a familiar neighborhood. See those buildings? They're exciting places to visit because something's always going on inside. Just click a building and a window opens up, offering you a choice of things to do.

In each building, you'll find different kinds of information and activities provided by major news services and by firms in the forefront of the electronic publishing industry. You'll find an electronic-mail center that sends your eMail around the world, a computer center with loads of information about Apple® products (including software demos you can try out), on-line discussion groups you can join, and interactive games you can play.

Who's Here
MaryH: I have had a good deal of success with getting people to participate in neighborhood projects, by doing an invitation and sending it out ahead of time.
TomP: That's interesting, Mary.
TomP: I always find that it's best to set up a meeting, so that people can become familiar with the issue -- face to face.
LindaG: Why not do both?
LindaG: Folks in my neighborhood really like to think things over before they show up for anything.
LindaG: Give them some notice, and then invite them to a meeting -- or a potluck (even better!)
MaryH: You know, we always end up talking about these ideas for getting people involved.
MaryH: Anyone interested in setting up a regular conference to talk about this sort of thing?
What a great idea, Mary. I'll set up a conference next week.

Getting Started

Becoming a member of eWorld is easy. It takes just a few minutes to set up your account and make your first connection. Follow the instructions on this page.

For a comprehensive guide to eWorld, you can purchase eWorld: The Official Guide for Macintosh Users by visiting the Info Booth in eWorld or your local bookstore. Or you can order it by calling 1-800-428-5331 (mention code INBX).

A world of information for $8.95 a month.

Your monthly fee of $8.95 includes two free hours of use during evenings or weekends.

For additional use, you will be charged the following hourly rates:

	Evenings and weekends*	Weekdays
First two hours of use per month	Free!	$2.95 per hour
Additional hours of use	$4.95 per hour	$7.90 per hour

 Evening and weekend rate is in effect 6:00 P.M. to 6:00 A.M. local time, Monday through Friday and all day Saturday and Sunday.*

 Weekday rate is in effect 6:00 A.M. to 6:00 P.M. local time, Monday through Friday.*

Charges to your eWorld account will be billed monthly to the credit card you use when you register.

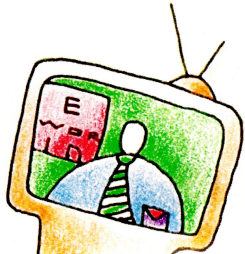
Pricing is based on one-minute increments of use.

eWorld service includes free use of the eMail Internet gateway.

When international service becomes available, there may be additional charges for use outside the United States.

Check with your local telephone company to find out whether long-distance charges apply when dialing your eWorld local access number.

There's no sign-up fee, so why not get started now?



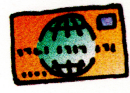
Step 1

Make sure you have what you need.

Here's what you need to connect to eWorld for the first time:

- The eWorld program, either on floppy disks or installed on your computer (see Step 3)
- A Macintosh computer with system software version 6.0.7 or later and at least 4 megabytes of RAM

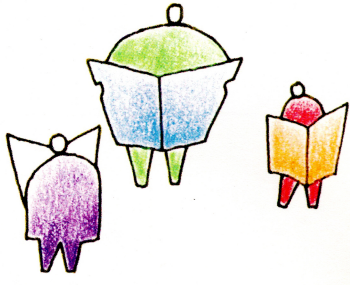
- A credit card (VISA, MasterCard, American Express, or Discover Card)



- A modem

A modem is a device that lets your computer communicate over phone lines. Your Macintosh may have a built-in modem, or you can attach an external modem. (See the manual that came with your computer to find out whether it has a built-in modem.)

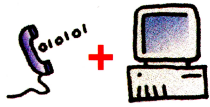
You can purchase modems in most computer stores. eWorld works with just about any modem with a speed of 2400 bits per second, but for maximum performance it's best to use a modem with a speed of at least 9600 bits per second.



Step 2

Set up your modem.

If your modem is already set up, skip to Step 3.



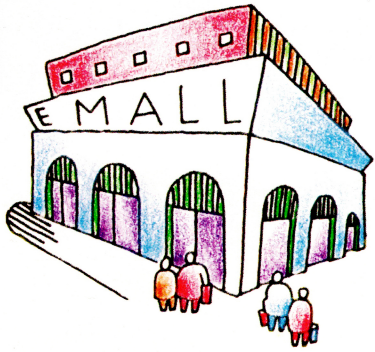
Otherwise, see your modem manual for instructions on connecting the modem and installing any necessary software.

Once your modem is up and running, go to Step 3.

Modem tips

When setting up your modem, follow these tips:

- Connect the modem to a telephone line.
- If you need to connect an external modem to your computer, match the icon on the cable with the icon on the back of your computer. If there is no icon on the cable, connect it to the modem port, which is identified by this icon: .
- If your modem requires a power supply, be sure to plug in the modem and turn on the power.



Step 3

Install the eWorld program (if necessary).

If you received these instructions with your computer, and the eWorld program has already been installed on your computer's hard disk, skip to Step 4 on the next panel.

If you received the eWorld program on a floppy disk or CD, follow these instructions to install the program on your hard disk:

1. Insert the Installer floppy disk into your computer, and open the disk by double-clicking its icon.

   (If your Macintosh cannot read the disk, you may have an older Macintosh with an 800K disk drive. If you have an 800K floppy disk drive, and you don't have 800K eWorld Installer floppy disks, you can obtain the eWorld program on 800K disks by calling 1-800-775-4556.)

2. Double-click the icon for the eWorld Installer.

3. In the box that appears, click Continue.

4. In the dialog box that appears, click Save.

   Follow the installation instructions on the screen.

   The program is copied onto your computer's hard disk.

5. When you see a message that installation was successful, click Quit.

Now you're ready to open the eWorld program.

Step 4

Open the eWorld program.

To open the program, follow these steps:

1. Find the eWorld Folder, and open it by double-clicking its icon.

2. Open the eWorld program by double-clicking its icon.

A screen appears welcoming you.

Welcome to e·World!
eWorld puts you in touch with exciting events and services, personal computing support, leading software publishers, and people across the country who share your interest in the Macintosh.
If you are connecting to eWorld for the first time, you'll need to take a few minutes to register as a member of the eWorld community. To register toll-free, click the Continue button below.

Continue

3. The first time you connect to eWorld, you'll be guided through a series of screens that tell eWorld about your modem and identify you as a new member.

   To complete the registration process, you will need the registration number and password printed on the back cover of this flyer.

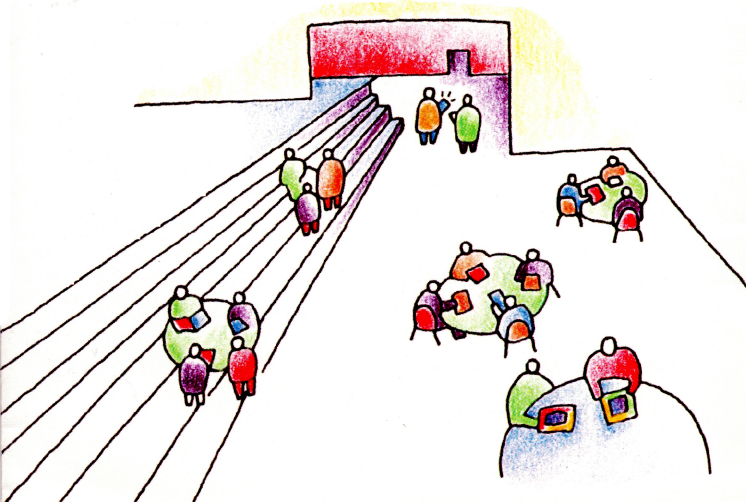
Connecting tips

If at first you don't succeed, try these suggestions for connecting to eWorld:

- Quit the eWorld program by choosing Quit from the File menu. Then reopen the program, and try going through the registration process again.
- Check the connections on your modem. Make sure that the modem is properly connected to your telephone line and your computer, and that the modem is turned on.
- Click the Info Booth, and check the on-screen help for advice on connecting.

If you are still unable to connect, call the eWorld Assistance Center at 1-800-775-4556, Monday through Friday, 6 A.M. to 6 P.M. Pacific time. eWorld representatives will be happy to assist you.

It's a good idea to change your password regularly. (To change your password, choose Change Password from the Membership menu.)

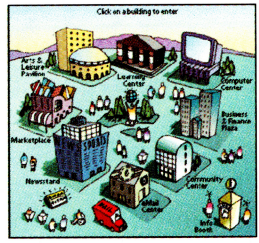


Step 5

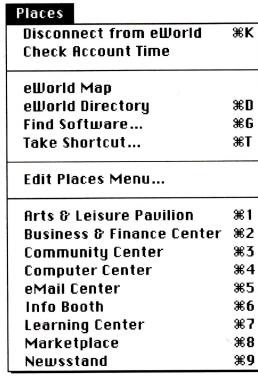
Explore.

Once you have connected, you'll want to get acquainted with eWorld. Here are a few tips:

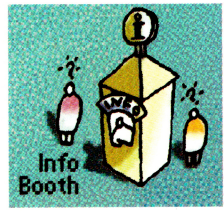
- To begin exploring, click any of the buildings on the eWorld map.



- You can also get around by choosing where you want to go from the Places menu.



- To find information about eWorld, click the Info Booth. The Info Booth includes information about eWorld services, billing and account history, and on-screen help.



- To end your on-line session, choose "Disconnect from eWorld" from the Places menu.
- When you're finished using eWorld, choose Quit from the File menu.

Your eWorld registration number and password.

Here's your passport to eWorld.

Everything you need to get to eWorld is right in front of you. Just set up your modem, open the eWorld program, and log on. See inside for detailed instructions.

Use this registration number and password to start your subscription to eWorld.
